ALBANY LAW SCHOOL

Colleagues:

At Albany Law School, one of the defining features of our faculty is a commitment to producing engaged and meaningful legal and interdisciplinary scholarship. Whether it is providing research on pressing local, state, national, and global issues; producing interdisciplinary research on health inequities, environmental justice, and technology's impact on society and the practice of law; or offering insightful perspectives on the law and popular culture, the work of our faculty members influences the legal academy and the judiciary, the practicing bar, business leaders, policymakers, scholars within other disciplines, and international audiences.

We are proud to play our part in broadening and enriching the analysis of the law and legal institutions as we engage in a creative and critical interrogation of the ways in which legal scholarship not only improves understanding of the law but also advances evolving conversations around equity and justice. We invite you to learn more about our faculty's recent published works.

Our best,
